

Canadian violinist Amy Brown is passionate about new music and creating sound worlds through both solo and ensemble playing. Originally from Red Deer, Alberta, Amy was raised to value community and share music widely, performing in schools, churches and hospices as well as participating in youth orchestras. She is currently based in Manitoba, completing a Bachelor of Music degree at Brandon University in the studio of Kerry DuWors. As a performance major at Brandon University, Amy has presented recitals both on campus and around the community including Chez Angela, Ten Thousand Villages, musical theatre productions and at Canadian Mennonite University's noon hour concert series. She's the recipient of Brandon University's J.W. Bill Cowan String Award, and has been recommended to both the Alberta and Manitoba Provincial Music Competition finals. In 2023, she won the Victor Krahn Memorial Trophy for strings at the Brandon Festival of the Arts.
